Official Election Websites: All 50 States

A nonpartisan directory of state election authorities | Updated October 13, 2026 | US Letter (8.5 × 11 in.)

Each state has an election authority, but not all use the title “Board of Elections.” Select a blue link to open the official state website. For county and municipal contests, follow the state office’s local-election directory or contact the relevant county election authority.

Research tip: State sites are the starting point for candidate filings, sample ballots, results, and state campaign-finance disclosure. For federal candidate donations, use FEC campaign finance data. Availability of historical candidate records varies by state and county.

Source note: This directory is based on the FEC's official state election office listing, with several URLs shortened or modernized for readability. Websites can change; the FEC directory is the fallback reference.
